How spoon is now: Rowe (left) and Wright

ON DEMAND

Shelter here!, TV-MA

Zach (Trevor Wright) is stuck in a rut flipping burgers, having skipped college to take care of his young nephew. In this coming-of-age film, a drunken kiss from friend Shaun (Brad Rowe) finds him questioning his sexuality. Coming out—and deciding to go to art school—pushes Zach to finally tell off his judgmental sister and live the life he wants. The energy between Rowe and Wright is zippy and hot, but as with many tales of gay love, Shelter tends to slide into skin-tastic melodrama. Still, it's an authentic romance that even straight folk can enjoy. B —Tanner Stransky
